

The First CoralWatch Workshop in Kish Island, Iran

18- 19 May 2011, Kish Free Zone Organization which is located in southwest of Iran, held a CoralWatch workshop.

Over 30 people from different organization such as; Environmental Organization, Fisheries Organization, Fisheries Research Organization, Maritime universities and many from dive centers participated to this workshop.

On Wednesday morning, 18th May, Participants became familiar to Coral and coral reef communities and their roles in aquatic environments.

On Wednesday afternoon, 18th May, they became familiar with different techniques which are using for corals evaluation in the world, currently. At the end of the day 18th, all the methods compared, all together.

On Thursday morning, 19th May, they became familiar with CoralWatch technique, theatrically.

And finally, on Thursday afternoon, 19th May, participants in two separated groups were familiar with CoralWatch method, practically

In order to operate of this method, participants were used from the corals that are held in Kish Marine Park Aquariums.

At bellow, a number of photos related to this workshop can be funded;

